

Upminster Mill, Essex

Albury S.I. carried out a series of Phase 1 and Phase 2 investigations at the site of Upminster Mill for a new visitor centre.

The historic corn mill, which had a coal-fired steam boiler was active until the 1930s. The intrusive investigation comprised ten boreholes around the smock windmill and former millers house, with a deep cable percussive borehole to provide information on ground conditions.